

DoView Tool B10 - Initiative or Policy Strategy Selection

B10

Approach	Method	Style	Focus/Setting
Educational/ Informational	One-to-one Classroom/Group Social Media Campaigns Traditional Media Campaigns	Knowledge acquisition Attitude change Behavior change Increasing awareness of the situation and rights	Individuals Specific Sub-Populations Indigenous Peoples
	Group formation Use of natural community leaders Grass roots community workers Community organizers/activists Provision of resources to communities	Community support Voicing community concerns Co-production Real change on the ground	Ethnic Groups Geographic Communities Community organizations
Monitoring and Regulatory Enforcement	Information provision about requirements Monitoring compliance with requirements Public rewarding and shaming ('League Tables') Monitoring and enforcement	Raising awareness of regulatory requirements Increasing system responsiveness Proactive enforcement	Interest Groups Private Companies
Institutional Development	Liaison Sectoral coordination Intersectoral collaboration	Networking Coordination Restructuring/building new institutional infrastructure	Public Institutions Regulatory Authorities
Policy, Rules and Standards Development	Organizational policies, local policies, by-laws national policies, regulations, legislation	Identifying policy options Providing information about policy options Generating debate on policy options Coalitions to support new positive policy options	Central and Local Policy Makers Central and Local Politicians

Source [3].: Duignan, P. (1997) Evaluating Health Promotion: The Strategic Evaluation Approach, University of Waikato Doctorate. p. 206.